Dance, Theatre, Spoken Word

BRIDGES is a woman-centered program of dance theatre works stitching individual creative responses into a patchworked performed discourse. Using the feminist devices of collaboration and coalition building, BRIDGES expresses a multiplicity of women’s experiences- using a range of performance styles from hip-hop, house, West African, Caribbean and American contemporary genres to tell our stories.
Greetings from Piper Hall,

The Women’s Studies and Gender Studies Program at Loyola is pleased and excited to begin the new Fall 2010 semester. We look forward to continue meeting and welcoming new students and faculty, and are happy to see familiar and friendly faces.

To kick off our new year, we have reformed and revamped the Weekly Digest into what you see here. The Digest has a main purpose of connecting the continually growing WSGS department to all interested. As listed on the cover, our Digest will cover many areas, designed with the intent to inform, assist, and connect. Look out for announcements, media, events, and even interviews and articles in the Digest!

Thus we hope you not only like the new designs, but find many uses and much information in our pages.

And at any time, if you have something you would like included in the digest, we are very pleased for your contributions. So if you...

- know of an event? send us info, media, and flyers!
- hear of an awesome job posting? tell us!
- want your training announcement here? we’ll post it!
- have a conference coming up? send the schedule!
- wrote an incredible article? share it!
- need to announce anything? we’ll help.
- are calling on interns and volunteers? we’re connected!
- got an interview to reveal? let us introduce people.
- have a crazy photo of your pet?

we’ll think about it...

We invite your feedback and contribution. Please enjoy the digest.

In solidarity,
the WSGS program

Question...
Been to Piper Hall yet?

Besides being a gorgeous mansion, Piper Hall is the home to the WSGS Program and is pictured above. It is located at the Southeast corner of Loyola’s lakeshore campus, and is right on the lake. On three sides are colorful and lush gardens. The first floor is for speakers, parties, and events. Come visit us on the second floor in our offices and classrooms. And on the third floor you will find the Women and Leadership Archives and its Director, Elizabeth Myers.

9 to 6 p.m. Saturday, September 18th 2010
University of Chicago, International House
1414 East 59th Street
Building off the "Something is Wrong" curriculum guide released in February 2010, community-based organizations from across Chicago will model how to engage youth in dialogue about the root causes of violence. Workshops will be offered by Beyondmedia Education, Blocks Together, Build Inc., Family Rescue, Gender Just, Literature for All of Us, Mikva Challenge, Project NIA, Rogers Park Young Women's Action Team, Umoja Student Development Corporation, Young Women's Empowerment Project. There are two ways that you can apply to participate in this event. You can complete an application online here: http://www.surveymonke.com/s/NQGRDN3. Or you can complete the attached application by September 3rd and send to <mailto:projectniaevents@hotmail.com>projectniaevents@hotmail.com or fax to 773-338-7774.
NOTE: Completing an application DOES NOT guarantee that you are registered. All confirmed registrations will be announced by September 11th 2010.
Global "Young Reporter" Competition
International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC)
Application Deadline: October 1, 2010
Each of the four winners of the competition will be invited to travel to a country that has been affected by armed conflict - Georgia, Lebanon, Liberia or the Philippines - where they will be able to talk with other young people who have lived through fighting or suffered its consequences. Each will be hosted by an ICRC delegation and will have the opportunity to see activities run by the ICRC and/or the National Red Cross Society in the country concerned. In addition, the young reporters will receive coaching on writing about humanitarian issues from ICRC experts.
At the end of their weeklong visit, each winner will be expected to produce a "story from the field," which will be presented at a special event next year in Geneva on World Red Cross Red Crescent Day, which takes place every year on 8 May.
To be eligible, applicants must have strong communication skills. They should be interested in youth issues, have a desire to do something that will have an effect on people's lives, and have done voluntary work related to social or humanitarian services. Aspiring young reporters must submit an article, photo essay or short video on a humanitarian challenge of their choice. Entries will be judged on the basis of editorial quality, originality and relevance. Candidates must be between the ages of 18 and 25, have a valid passport and should be available for travel in January or February 2011. Submissions are encouraged from young adults in all nations. The deadline for submissions is 1 October 2010. The winners will be notified by 1 November 2010. For full entry details, please go to competition<http://lists.hrea.org/phplist/it.php?id=Kh5QBqveGRTABgGCwEGV04GA1kHBg%3D%3D>.

Calling all future Steinems, Maddows, Amanpours and Courics!

Do you want to become a political commentator or journalist serving as a strong voice in the media? Apply for the last class of Progressive Women's Voices in 2010 today!

DUE SEPTEMBER 3, 2010!
Apply for Progressive Women's Voices here:
http://www.surveymonkey.com/s/CNNFPBG or nominate a friend:

Progressive Women's Voices is the premier media and leadership training program for women. Participants receive 50 hours of intensive in-person training to master effective interview techniques, craft strong media messages and newsworthy pitches, incorporate video into their work, and develop and place op-ed articles — improving their skills to serve as thought leaders for the media. By becoming a part of Progressive Women's Voices, you will join a roster of thought leaders who are visibly and powerfully commenting on the important issues of the day. In the words of Megan Watterson, Executive Director of REVEAL and a recent participant, Progressive Women's Voices "handed her soul a megaphone."

Progressive Women's Voices starts with a competitive application process, with final candidates chosen by a committee that includes WMC founders Jane Fonda, Gloria Steinem, and Robin Morgan. The application deadline for the last class of 2010 is September 3, 2010, with trainings to be held November 5-7 and December 3-5 in New York City. Travel, accommodation, and training expenses are covered by the WMC.

With the 2010 elections just around the corner, the Women's Media Center is working to ensure that broadcast, print and online commentators represent the diversity of our nation. Women representing diverse backgrounds, areas of expertise, professions, ethnicities, ages, geographical regions and levels of experience are encouraged to apply (including those who have previously applied). Beyond the Body: Migrating Past Physical Borders in Feminist Literature
Call for Papers for a Proposed Edited Collection
Application deadline: December 1, 2010
The body remains a preeminent place of reading in feminist theory, past and present. But, we wish to complete a feminist examination of those areas of research that speak of movements beyond the physical body. This project seeks papers that examine feminist literary characters that negotiate multiple borders and identities. What borders exist to be transgressed? What are the consequences (mental, physical, social) of transgressing these borders? What is specifically feminist in the act of crossing a border, any border that exists?
We are looking to put together 10-12 essays (which we will edit, introduce, and conclude) with the following sub-categories: 1. Spiritual Borders - This section might study the crossing of mental and religious borders between individuals and groups or institutions. Topics such as possession, individual versus community agency and familial ties would be addressed. 2. Social Borders - This section might consider the traversing of socially constructed lines that influence status, comportment, and social determinations. We are specifically interested in those projects that analyze literary works in which there are transgressions of identities of gender and sexuality. 3. Cultural Borders - This section will examine the literary consequences of crossing seemingly distinct ethnic and/or racial borders.
The collection welcomes projects that explore works in all languages; however, we do request that the author translate all excerpts in foreign languages into English. Submitted works must be original and never been published in any form, or are under consideration by other publishers. Please submit an abstract of 350 words, along with a 50 word author biography by December 1, 2010 to feministmigrations@gmail.com. Successful contributors will be notified by February 2011.

Laboring On: Testimony, Theory & Transgressions of Black Mothering in Academia
Call for Papers for an edited collection
Application deadline: November 1, 2010
This book aims to interrogate the intersecting forms of oppression that are experienced by Black female faculty and scholars who "labor" and "mother" within the academy. The context in which Black female academics occupy is an important starting point to consider given the longstanding history of the patriarchal, racially biased, and anti-family environment of academia. Post civil rights and women rights colleges and universities continue to be sites of struggle and resistance for African American women despite higher education achievements. This anthology will offer a particularly nuanced discussion on the emergent literature on parenting and work that explores academic institutions that largely mark black women's bodies as deviant and pathological.
We encourage submissions that explore various constructions of "mothering" and "being mothered" which contribute to the experiences of Black women academics. For the purposes of this book we have broadened our conceptualization of 'mothering' to include care work. Thus "mothering" may include the expectations or practice of providing formal or informal support to students of color and/or students that are alienated within the academy, as well as the mentoring of junior faculty, faculty of color, female faculty, caregiving/parenting faculty, and those outside the academy. The term "labor" theoretically extends this volume to include the voices of Black academic women who often occupy the lowest echelons of the academic class structure. We also invite contributions that encompass the strains between work and home/community life for Black academic mothers.
Submission guidelines: Abstracts should be 250 words. Please also include a brief biography (50 words).
Deadline for abstracts Nov 1, 2010. Accepted papers of 4000-5000 words (15-20 pages) will be due June 1, 2011 and should conform to the Modern Language Association style. Please send submissions directly to: Sekile Nzinga-Johnson snzinga3@naz.edu and Karen T. Craddock kcrad@brandeis.edu

The Women & Leadership Archives Lecture Series

Marie Curie: Woman, Scientist, Subtle Feminist
By: Mia Gutsell

September 15, 2010
12:00-1:00pm
Piper Hall Room 201
Please feel free to bring a bagged lunch!

How did Marie Curie's life stand as a testament to women?
This lecture will explore how through Curie's childhood, education, and adulthood, she represented feminism not as an advocate for women's rights, but by her own achievements as an individual. When few women worked to earn their own living, Curie broke barriers in the scientific community, and in society as a whole. Ms. Gutsell will discuss Curie's achievements as a scientist, and a woman in a society in which she was restricted as the second sex, and how she has been conceived as a role model for generations to come.

Women, Diplomacy and International Politics since 1500 Conference
Application deadline: October 30, 2010
Co-organised Glenda Sluga (Sydney), Giulia Calvi (EUI), Barbara Caine (Sydney/Monash), Carolyn James, (Monash). The new international history has provided a framework for critiquing the narrow assumptions of existing historiographies of international politics and exploring a range of new themes in respect of agency, chronology, and gender. This two-day workshop will highlight the role of women as participants and agents in international political life since the early modern age. Its aim is to explore the many ways in which women have been involved in diplomacy and in international politics, highlighting the diversity of their activities and the significance of their contributions. In focussing on women, we hope to bring to the fore new themes and to make new suggestions relevant to the characterisation of developments in international history. We are interested in papers that look at the participation of women in particular national and local contexts, including particular European courts; at their involvement in major international diplomatic conferences and congresses and at their role in international political organizations. Some of the themes include: Women, marriage and diplomacy; The political significance of private friendships; The woman diplomat; Women writing about international politics.

The conference will take place in December 2011 at the EUI in Florence. If you are interested in participating in this workshop, please send your cv and a short abstract by October 30, 2010, to: Glenda Sluga@sydney.edu.au.

Internship with Attorney General Lisa Madigan’s Campaign

Madigan’s team offers interns the opportunity to broaden their communication skills, make connections and work in a personable office setting while gaining hands on experience with fundraising, research and outreach. This is an exciting time for political science or otherwise qualified students to work on a campaign and, as we have enjoyed positive experiences with interns from your university in the past, we would be grateful for your assistance in helping us recruit students in whose abilities you have great confidence. We seek interns who are hard working, self-motivated, detail-oriented and who work well in a team setting. Interns of this description will be asked to donate approximately ten to fifteen hours or more of their week to the campaign and can receive course credit.

In application for the position students should submit a cover letter and resume to: Libby Prakel at lprakel@lisamadigan.org, or call 312-670-0606 for further information.

Volunteer Advocate for Survivors of Sexual Assault at LUC

Application deadline: September 10

The Wellness Center is leading a 3-year grant project through the U.S. Dept. of Justice, Office on Violence Against Women. A major goal of this project is to increase the reporting rates of sexual assault, domestic/dating violence, and stalking on campus. We wish to increase our ability to respond to students as immediately as possible. Graduate students in social science, social services, higher education, and other related fields are being sought as volunteer advocates to help increase our response to survivors of sexual assault at LUC.

Volunteer advocates will be expected to complete 56 hours of training through Rape Victim Advocates in downtown Chicago. The next training will occur in October 2010 and is split into 16 evening sessions (Mon-Thurs): 10/4-10/7, 10/11-10/14, 10/18-10/21, and 10/25-10/28 from 5:30 – 9:30 PM. Some of these sessions are make-up sessions; you will not have to attend all 16.

Internship with Attorney General Lisa Madigan’s Campaign

Volunteer Advocate for Survivors of Sexual Assault at LUC
This book shares the experiences of an African woman who developed from powerlessness to great empowering heights, and it attempts to communicate to the world the experiences and stories of the many voiceless African women and their children. The contents are mostly stories, beliefs and philosophies of African women. They are true experiences – some are breathtaking and others are heartbreaking.
