SHAH WALI ALLAH OF DELHI'S ARRANGEMENT OF THE SUBTLE SPIRITUAL CENTRES (LATA'IF)

MARCIA K. HERMANSSEN

An Aspect of his thought explained using material from the collection of religious and philosophical letters being edited for publication under the auspices of the Indian Institute of Islamic Studies, Tughlaqabad, New Delhi (India).

This paper will present an explanation of some previously unexamined aspects of Shāh Wali Allāh's (d. 1762) conception of the subtle spiritual centres (lata'if). For Shāh Wali Allāh these spiritual components of a person were of great importance in explaining the theory and practice of individual spiritual progress on the Sufi path. His arrangement of these centres, together with his explanation of their interaction with one another directly reflects his more comprehensive understanding of cosmology and ontology, and therefore this aspect of his thought is less esoteric than it might initially seem.

The term lata'ifa is derived from the Arabic word latif meaning gentle, sensitive, or subtle. In Sufi terminology the term lata'ifa first emerged in reference to the idea of a subtle body (jism-e latafī) associated with the spiritual dimension of the person. It was believed by the Sufis that this non-material part of the person was the most susceptible to spiritual discipline and exercises. Eventually the theoretically oriented Sufis developed systematic models and a terminology of these centres related to the various spiritual aspects of individuals in which each one of these particular aspects was considered a lata'ifa, (pl. lata'īf). The word lata'ifa, in this context, has on occasions been translated “subtlety,” “subtle point,” or “subtle essence.” Since some of these lata'īf have been diagrammed in the works of Shāh Wali Allāh with circular shapes I prefer to translate lata'īf as “subtle spiritual centres” following the usage by Annemarie Schimmel, although the concept of “centre” is not necessarily to be understood from the term itself.

Among the Sufi writers, Shāh Wali Allāh provides one of the most detailed explanations of the lata'īf, to which he devoted an entire book, Alīf al-Quds⁴ as well as many references in his mystical works such as al-Tafhīmāt al-Ilāhiyya.

Shāh Wali Allāh in his description of the latā'īf further developed a model existing among the Naqshbandi Śūfīs, in particular the Naqshbandiya-Mujaddidiyya branch, so called because they followed the tradition of Ṣaḥīḥ Aḥmad Sirhindī (d. 1625) who was known as the Mujaddid or Renewer of the Second Milennium. This system was based on the idea that the human being had ten basic parts—five material and five immaterial. The lower level of the material parts consisted of the Lower Soul (nafs) and the four elements (fire, earth, air, and water), while the higher level consisted of the five latā'īf, sometimes referred to as the five jewels (al-jawāhir al-khamsa); the Heart (qalb), Spirit (rūḥ), Mystery (sīr), Arcane (khāfī) and the Most or Super-Arcane (akhfā').⁵ (Refer to the diagram on the next page for a depiction of this model.) The two levels of this Naqshbandī system were said to correspond to the distinction between the World of God's Command (ʿālam al-amr) and the World of God's Creation (ʿālam al-khalq), a distinction based on Qur’ānic terminology and having a long history in Śūfī thought. An example is the interpretation of the Qur’ānic verse, “the Spirit is from the Command (ʿamr) of my Lord” (17:85), which is understood by the Śūfīs to mean that the human spirit (rūḥ) originates in the immaterial, timeless world of God’s Command (ʿālam al-amr) at a level preceding any temporal, physical manifestation.

It is also interesting to note that the five-fold structure of the latā’īf according to the Naqshbandiya-Mujaddidiyya model seems to parallel the concept in Hellenized Islamic medical theory (ṭībb) in which a person has five inner (mental) and five outer (physical) senses.

While the model of the latā’īf according to Shāh Wali Allāh is described most fully in his mystical works such as al-Tafhīmāt al-Ilāhiyya and Alīf al-Quds, he appears to have continually refined these concepts throughout his life since works which are apparently earlier, such as his Hamāt and Ḥuṣnāt Allāh al-Bāliga, allude to aspects of it in an incomplete or preliminary way. In his most complete version of the structure of the spiritual components of the person, Shāh Wali Allāh expanded the Naqshbandī model to include a higher, third level comprised of five centres which he termed the Concealed Subtle Spiritual Centres (al-Latā’īf al-Kāmina). The diagram at p. 141 presented in this paper is based on one accompanying his description of these centres in the work al-Tafhīmāt al-Ilāhiyya. The names which he gave to some of these centres initially appear to be new to the tradition but have some precedent in certain works of Ibn al-`Arabī (d. 1240), whose thought was a great influence on Shāh Wali Allāh. A major purpose of Wali Allāh in elaborating this highest level is to explain in more detail the paths of Prophetic Inheritance (wirātha al-nubuwwa) and that of saintship (wilāyāt) which could be followed by individual spiritual aspirants. Since I have discussed his descriptions of these higher centres and the level of the Concealed Laṭā‘if at length in another paper, I will rather focus on aspects of the development of Shāh Wali Allāh’s model related to its structure, and to his understanding of the relationship between the intermediate level of centres associated with individual “psychological” aspects of the person and the physical or material level of being, at the level below this.

Comparing the additions of Shāh Wali Allāh with the Naqshbandiyya-Mujaddidiyya model (see diagrams 1 and 2), one observes that Shāh Wali Allāh has expanded the two levels of laṭā‘if to three by adding to the second level the laṭifa Intelligence (‘aql ) as well as by adding the new centres in the topmost circle. The new arrangement of centres in the middle circle is certainly not random. This middle circle represents for Shāh Wali Allāh the arena of voluntary self-transformation, the place where the divine and the earthly components of the person are mediated through the development and ultimate transcendence of individuality. Another way of expressing this is that the middle circle for Shāh Wali Allāh is understood as the dimension of the human person which is in tension between the higher angelic forces inherent in his nature pulling from above and the material or animalistic component of his being attracting him from below. This tension between the angelic and animalistic forces figures prominently in Shāh Wali Allāh’s theory of virtue and the attainment of happiness as expounded in his master work, Huḍjāt Allāh al-Bālīgha (diag. at p. 142).

Examining the diagram of this middle circle, we find that at the top Shāh Wali Allāh has placed the Rational Soul (al-nafs al-nātīqa) which according to his thought is the source of the individuality of the person while it transmits the characteristics of the form of the human species (ṣūra na‘ū’iyya). At the bottom of the circle is the Lower Soul (nafs) or Mould (qālab). Each of these two centres thus marks a transition point—the Rational Soul between the human and the higher or angelic realm, and the Lower Soul between the psychological (nafsānī) and the physical or natural (ṭabīṣī) functions of personhood.

Following Shāh Wali Allāh’s descriptions of the centres around the circumference of the middle circle, we understand that we are to perceive it as composed of two sides or paths, the left and the right. On our left is placed the centre Intelligence (ʿaql) and above it the Mystery (sirr). On the right side is found the Heart (qalb) and above it the Spirit (rūḥ). The centres Spirit, Heart, and Mystery were commonly held by the Šūfīs to represent important spiritual aspects of a person. The Intelligence (ʿaql) and the Heart were naturally known to the medical tradition as well as to Šūfī religious psychology, but the Šūfīs did not totally identify their latāʿīf with corresponding physical organs, although there was believed to be some relationship, at least at the lower levels.

Shāh Wali Allāh specifies that the Mystery (sirr) represents a higher aspect or refinement of the Intelligence, just as the Spirit (rūḥ) represents a further refinement of the qualities of the Heart (qalb) latīfa. Therefore his arrangement of the latāʿīf around the circle symbolizes both this affinity and hierarchy among the centres while at the same time it indicates the paths which an aspirant might follow in order to progress upward towards the Divine Essence.

A further indication of the interrelationships among the latā'if may be derived from Wali Allāh’s explanation of the way in which spiritual progress occurs. At the initial stages of the path what is required of a person is the harmonization of the physical components controlled through the lower centres so that the person’s temperament becomes balanced according to his individual constitution. This state is effected through developing cooperation among the three major centres; the Heart, Intelligence, and Lower Soul (nafs), corresponding in medical theory or ilm al-ṭibb to the organs heart, brain, and liver, and in Hellenized Ṣūfi psychology to emotions, rationality, and physical desires. Therefore it can be seen that his theory assumes that psychological states affect physical aspects of the person. According to Shāh Wali Allāh, the process of harmonization is required for every human individual in order to ensure physical health, happiness, the cultivation of virtue, and ultimate salvation. His theory of religion affirms that the ideal formula to effect this balancing of the human temperament has been provided in the form of the Divine laws sent by God through the prophets and culminating in the revelation of the Divine Law (sharī‘a) of Islam.¹⁰

Beyond the basic harmonizing of the functions of the lower centres according to the requirements of the human species, the cultivation of the higher latā'if is not expected of every person and therefore, according to Wali Allāh, the latā'if Spirit, Mystery, and those at higher levels were not mentioned in the sharī‘a (although many Ṣūfīs find allusions to them in the language of the Qur‘ān). In order to cultivate and refine these higher latā'if additional spiritual practices are required. For example, according to Wali Allāh the way to purify the Spirit (rūḥ) is the observance of purity at all times, the recitation of the Qur‘ān, mystical exercises, and cultivating an intuitive relationship with the souls of the saints. The Mystery (sīr), on the other hand, is awakened by contemplating the Divine attributes, meditating on God’s Divine Names, and the silent and wordless forms of the remembrance of God (dhikr).¹² It is thus possible to see how Wali Allāh associates practices of a more “mental” or “intellectual” nature with the Mystery, a fact consistent with his depicting it as the higher level of the Intelligence (aql) latīfa.
Once having understood how Shāh Wali Allāh arranged his spiritual centres at the middle level, I was curious to determine whether his conceptualizing of the position of the centres at the physical or lowest level would correspond in some way to this order. The diagram in the most recent edition of al-Tafhīmāt al-Ilāhiyya did not provide any assistance here, for the lowest centres were not included there, although other texts made it clear that the lowest circle contained the Lower Soul (nafs) or Mould (qālah) and the four elements. The four elements in traditional Islamic medical science and cosmology are of course fire, air, earth and water, and anyone versed in īlm al-ţibb or the Islamic version of Astrology as Shāh Wali Allāh certainly was, would likely have the traditional associations concerning the interrelationships and symbolic correspondences of these elements. With this as a starting assumption, I felt fairly confident in assuming that the centre representing the element “air” in the lowest circle would correspond to the position of the ʿalīf “Intelligence” above, since this element is traditionally associated with mental activity, the planet Mercury, and so on. In fact, the need to incorporate a centre which would both correspond to the element air and make his model symmetrical may have influenced Shāh Wali Allāh to insert this new ʿalīf, in the model. In identifying the centres associated with the other three elements I was less certain at first, but I speculated that the element “fire” would be positioned in some correspondence with the element “air” as it is generally considered to be compatible in its nature to “air”. That “fire” should be associated by Wali Allāh with the Mystery, indicating that it was perceived as higher or more subtle than “air”, also seemed likely following the traditional arrangement of the elements. This correspondence left the elements “earth” and “water” to the side of the diagram associated with the Heart and Spirit lāfāʿif and here I guessed that “earth,” since it is lower in the ranking of the elements, would correspond to the Heart and “water” to the Spirit.

I was interested to find this supposed arrangement of the elements confirmed in some of the unpublished letters of Shāh Wali Allāh, Maktūbāt-i-Dīnī va Īlmi, in the collection being prepared for publication by the Indian Institute of Islamic Studies, Tughlaqabad, New Delhi (India). For example, in the letter no. 51 addressed to his disciple Muḥammad ʿĀshiq, Shāh Wali Allāh mentions that he associates the Heart lāfīfa with the element “earth”. A further indication is that in letter no. 88, written to Bābā ʿUṭhman, Shāh Wali Allāh describes qualities which Sufis develop through the cultivation of the latif “Spirit” (rūḥ) and says that they can be symbolized by the “water of life” (āb-i-hayāt). He then explains that the cultivation of the Mystery (sirr) leads to a state best compared to the “Fire of Sinai” (ātish-i-Tūr), referring to the fire of Sinai which appeared to Moses (Qurʾān 28:29). These allusions confirm that the arrangement of the four elements in the lowest circle was carefully worked out to be in correspondence to the attributes of the centres of the middle circle which were associated with aspects of individual psychology.

It was also interesting to observe that Shah Wali Allāh had deliberately departed here from the traditional Naqshbandiyya-Mujaddidiyya arrangement of the elements as he noted in the same letter to his chief disciple Muḥammad Āshiq:

The secret of the Shaikhs of Sirhind (i.e., the Naqshbandiyya-Mujaddidiyya shaikhs) saying that after traversing the latif the matter falls in with the origins of the subtle spiritual centres, is that they interpreted [this] by associating the Spirit (rūḥ) with “air”, the Mystery (sirr) with “water”, the Arcane khāfī) with “fire”, and the Super-Arcane (akhīfa) with “earth”.

Wali Allāh then explains in this letter that there is a parallelism of all things in the universe, which is reflected in the arrangement of the inner and outer latif as well as the order of the bodily humours and the elements. He refers to the fact that in his system the Heart (qalb) is to be associated with the element “earth”. This could be an allusion to the fact that in Sirhindī’s system there is no element left for the Heart to be associated with, a problem resolved in Wali Allāh’s arrangement which maintains the parallel structure at all of the levels.16

Although this discovery concerns a relatively minor detail of Shah Wali Allāh’s thought, it confirms the consistent efforts of our author to maintain a pattern of symbolic interrelationships among the components of both the spiritual and the physical worlds.

This consistent patterning is seen in other dimensions of Shah Wali Allāh’s works; for example, his theory of religious revelation,17 and his idea that societies develop through progressive stages of refinement and complexity (irtifāqāt). Ultimately he sees the entire universe unfolding and even evolving according to this pattern, that at the lowest level the parts of systems need to resolve their internal conflicts so that the system may fulfill its original potential as bestowed by the individual and specific forms. Once this harmony and fulfilment have been achieved, the system is able to expand to a higher and more complex order of being as determined by a new form. This expansion is, of course, not evolutionary in a materialistic sense, since it depends on Divine mercy and generosity as a source of the new form as well as on individual effort.

Shâh Wali Allâh, in his system of the subtle spiritual centres as in many other facets of his thought, maintains the understanding that conflict at the lowest levels of being must be overcome in order for progress to occur. Progress, whether spiritual or material, is inspired and guided by the one great purpose of the entire universe which he calls al-maṣlaḥa al-kulliyya. This understanding, which is in effect a reconciliation of a theory based on inherent conflict with a monistic one in which movement is directed by one great force, reflects Wali Allâh's intellectual mediation between Shaikh Sirhindi's doctrine of the Unity of Experience (wahdat al-shuhûd), a doctrine positing an ongoing struggle among conflicting forces, and the monistic ontology of the Unity of Existence (wahdat al-wujûd) held by Ibn al-'Arabi and his followers.18

It may be observed that Shâh Wali Allâh's depiction of the latâ'îf also offers a resolution of the dispute among certain advocates of Sirhindi's doctrine, which ranked the station of prophecy highest, and certain followers of the "wujûdî" school, who contended that saintship (wilâyat) was the highest station. His portrayal of the structure of the person and the mystical path toward the Divine Essence as having both a left and a right side is graphic evidence of this mediating position. According to the design of this model, no longer does prophecy have to be positioned at a rank above saintship, or vice versa. Instead, both the right and the left paths, respectively the path of prophetic inheritance (wirâtha al-nubuwwa) and the path of the greater saintship (al-wilâyat al-kubrâ), need to be traversed by the Sûfi who wishes to attain the ultimate goal in the most comprehensive way.19

8 It cannot be argued here that a concept of three levels is wholly innovative in Shâh Wali Allâh’s thought, for, as Henri Corbin has detailed in several works, a tradition existed in Iranian mystical thought and in certain Neo-Platonists such as Proclus, of the human level as the intermediate of three. See for example his En Islam Iranien, vol. 3, pp. 313, and Spiritual Body and Celestial Earth, Princeton, 1978. In the latter work Corbin explains that Shaikh Simnâni (d. 1336) spoke of three bodies of the person:

(1) the perishable earthly body (jîsma dunyawi)
(2) the acquired or developed body (jîsma muktasib)
(3) the body of resurrection (jîsma mahshüri)

Mullâ Şadr Shîrâzî’s (d. 1640) thought also contains some interesting parallels. For this, see Fazlur Rahman, The Philosophy of Mullâ Şadr (State University of New York, 1975), pp. 180-185.

Wali Allâh incorporates ideas similar to Simnâni’s in his theory that the Spirit (rûh) has three levels: the Pneuma (nasama), the Rational Soul (al-nafs al-nâtiqa), and the heavenly Spirit (al-rûh al-samawi), and that these are associated with respectively higher dimensions of personhood. These three levels of the Spirit may be understood to correspond to the three levels of the laṭâ’îf.

this. The idea that the practices enjoined by the "shari'a" balance the physical elements of the person is also found in Sirhindi, Maktūbāt, vol. 2, pt. 6, pp. 160-163.

14 In Altâf al-Quds and Al-Tafhimāt al-Ilāhiyya this arrangement is mentioned.

15 In his autobiography "Al-Juz’ al-Latif," medicine or ṭibb is mentioned as one of the subjects which he studied; in particular he cites the work Mūjaz al-Qanūn, an abridgement by Ibn al-Nafis (d. 1288) of Ibn Sinā’s Qanūn. There are many indications in al-Tafhimāt that Wali Allâh was familiar with astrology or "ilm al-nujūm.

16 In letter no. 51 of the Indian Institute of Islamic Studies collection “Maktūbāt-Dinī va-"Ilmi".

17 See M.K. Hermansen, “Shâh Wali Allâh of Delhi’s Ḥujjat Allâh al-Baligha” for a discussion of this theory.

18 He wrote his famous letter, “Maktūb-i-Madani”, reprinted in Al-Tafhimāt al-Ilāhiyya 2, pp. 261-284, in an effort to demonstrate that there was no essential difference between "waḥdat al-wujūd" and "waḥdat al-šuhūād".

19 The assumption that the spiritual aspirant must traverse both paths to reach the Divine Essence explains Shâh Wali Allâh’s positioning of the Arcane Centre (khafī) above the Super Arcane (akhfā), as he observes in his Al-Tafhimāt al-Ilāhiyya 1, p. 245:

> If you say: “If the Super Arcane is lower than the rest of the Concealed Laṭā’if then why is it called the "Super-Arcane"?

I reply that it is called the Super-Arcane because the comprehensive general knowledge which is obtained from [completing] the two courses [the left and the right paths towards the Divine Essence] together, is only achieved after the two courses. The traveller on the mystic path arrives only after having completed both of them, and therefore it [the Akhfā—since it is at the foot of each path] is called the Super-Arcane.
